Flashback to our September Meeting

Greeters: Linda Thorpe & Ellen Duggan

Guest Speaker Thanh Campbell

Introduced by Janice Mononen; Thanked by Aline Chan.

A family lost and found: The story of Orphan 32.

Thirty-eight years ago a toddler named Thanh was plucked out of a grim Saigon orphanage and whisked on board a giant Canadian Forces Hercules plane. The number 32 was pinned to his shirt and he and 56 other parasite-ridden and malnourished Vietnamese youngsters took off in a hail of North Vietnamese gunfire. It was part of an international rescue in April 1975 nicknamed Operation Babylift, and the Canadian plane was the last one out before the communist forces overtook Saigon.

After they landed in Toronto, Nguyen Ngoc Minh Thanh would become Thanh Campbell. He would find a new family and a new life, something he remains thankful for beyond words. On April 18, 1975, he was adopted by Presbyterian Minister William Campbell and his wife Maureen of Cambridge, Ont. The couple has three biological children and two other adopted children.

But as the years went by he yearned to know about his biological family. He came to think of the other children on the flight as a kind of extended family and he wanted to touch base with as many of them as possible.

That decades-long quest is now the subject of a book that was unveiled at special fundraiser last year for City Kidz, a nondenominational Christian organization with a branch in Hamilton that works with inner city children.
